

THIS WEEK IN THE BIBLE

MAR 28-APR 3

Our week starts off with a bang, as Luke confirms Matthew's and Mark's accounts of Jesus' glorious mountaintop transfiguration. As the book of Deuteronomy draws to a close, so does the life of Moses. Knowing this, the great leader prepares the Israelites to continue without him. He reminds them one last time of their covenant with God, and he names a steadfast military man as his successor who will lead them to their long-awaited conquest and settlement of the Promised Land.

At long last, the Israelites cross the Jordan River into the Promised Land, finally erasing the shame of their slavery in Egypt. In their campaign to drive out the Canaanites, they encounter victories—the fall of Jericho—as well as setbacks—Achan’s sin and cover-up. In the New Testament, Luke offers up a wealth of parables, as Jesus urges his listeners to repent and ready themselves for the Lord’s coming.

THIS WEEK IN THE BIBLE

Having led God's people to victory over literally dozens of Canaanite kings, Joshua follows God's instructions for dividing the land among the twelve Israelite tribes. Much of the Promised Land has yet to be conquered, but God assures Joshua that God will lead his people to conquest even after Joshua's death. In the New Testament, Jesus changes the life of a man named Zacchaeus and then receives a rapturous welcome in Jerusalem, but his enemies continue to look for ways to get rid of him.

Luke gives his account of Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection, including one event that is found nowhere else in the Gospels: Jesus' stirring words to the criminal crucified beside him. In the Old Testament, God's people fall into a cycle of sinfulness and oppression by their pagan neighbors, but God is never far from them. When they cry out for help, he appoints certain individuals to rescue them—"judges" such as Deborah and Gideon.

THIS WEEK IN THE BIBLE

In the Old Testament, we witness the Israelites at their most sinful. Even their judges exhibit some less-than-admirable qualities. Their depravity comes to a head with an episode that mirrors the depraved acts of Sodom and Gomorrah. The Gospel of John, by contrast, begins by revealing Jesus' monumental importance as the divine Son of God. John recounts events that are not recorded anywhere else, including the wedding feast that features Jesus' very first miracle.
